AURELIUS SELLS

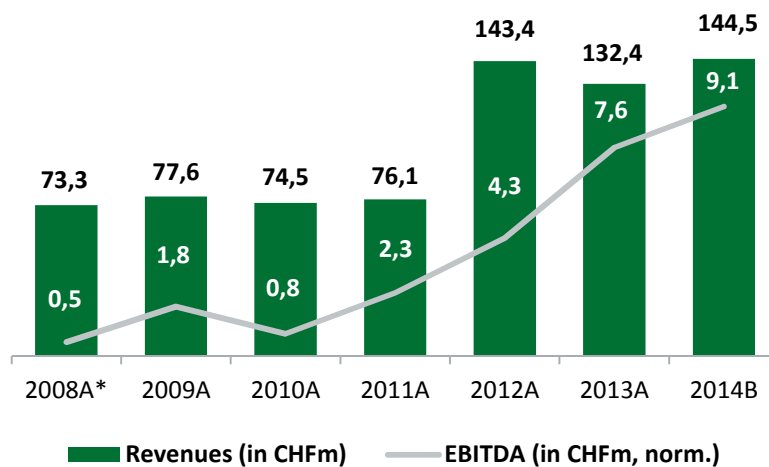

TO SPIE GROUP

CONNECTIS: SUCCESSFUL HISTORIC DEVELOPMENT

FINANCIAL PERFORMANCE

* estimated, adjusted for Sunrise effect

- Since buying Connectis in 2008, AURELIUS systematically enhanced the company's market position and improved its standing from fifth-biggest to second-biggest ICT provider in Switzerland
- This period of significant historical growth has been driven by solid organic growth and several important add-on acquisitions and continuous margin expansion
- The Company has managed a conscious shift from low profitability one-time re-sale business to a recurring service business of long-term contracts

AURELIUS

AURELIUS developed ISOCHEMS' Hungarian production unit into a highly profitable stand-alone business

GROUPE SNPE

- Framochem was the Hungarian subsidiary of French ISOCHEM, which we bought from state-owned SNPE Group
- The business was primarily used as production unit, producing intermediates for ISOCHEM or other SNPE subsidiaries on demand, leading to extensive production inefficiencies
- Reporting and controlling standards were outdated and not catering to the size and set-up of Framochem
- Sales and marketing were centrally managed by ISOCHEM, sales agents and distributors, main focus on selling volumes rather than achieving profits
- March 2010: Acquisition of ISOCHEM by AURELIUS

- Since the acquisition in 2010, AURELIUS' carve-out specialists and task force team focused on the separation of the non-core business from the French parent company
- The team set-up stand-alone sales channels, focusing on customer service, high margin products and premium clients
- A number of operational improvements have been implemented, which included the expansion of the production facilities as well as an update and upgrade of the controlling standards and systems
- Furthermore, the existing R&D capacities have been extended in order to be able to cater to individual customer demands

Purchase Price: EUR 8m (thereof approx. EUR 2m allocated to Framochem)

*Société nationale des poudres et des explosifs, a French conglomerate, focussed on the production of chemicals and explosives

Framochem today: a highly profitable business supplying specialised intermediates to blue chip customers

- AURELIUS operational improvements and product strategy were highly successful: revenues grew by 25% and EBITDA by 30% to a margin level of 21% from 2010 to 2014
- Very strong trading in 2014 supports the further growth of revenues and profits
- Currently, products are being used in attractive end-markets, such as pharmaceuticals, agrochemicals and various cosmetics and consumer goods
- Today, the business has a highly attractive customer base including Bayer, Symrise and Symrise
